A Gift of Permanent Value. In an edicrial on School Gardens the Forcester Gazette of Saturday said: "The proof of the pudding is in the eating." The dish referred to is that for which the annual gift of David Fanning is largely responsible. The yearly distribution of prizes to the amount of $500 for the purpose of enamount of $500 for the purpose of encouraging home gardening is one of the noiseworthy features of school life in Worcester. From the moment, in early spring when youthful Worcester receives the necessary seeds, to the exhibition in Mechanics' hall, there is not an hour when the parents and friends of those thus interested do not feel themselves obligated to the generous gentleman whose kindness and love of children has made the gardens and exhibition possible.

There is not a day, from that of planting to the harvest season, when something of interest does not attach to the labors of the grammar school children in this city, who, under the eventual ripening. That indispensable characteristic of success, viz., careful-ness, here has its full value shown and realized. Rain falls on the just and the unjust, but only he "gets there" who has diligently wrought with spade, hoe rake and watering pot. Any lapse on the part of the caretaker is shown at once in the condition of his charge. The qualities named are just as essential in the other features of work for whose perfecting Mr. Fanning's gifts are made, viz., cooking and needlework
